

STORIES OF CHURCH LIFE DONE DIFFERENTLY

Re-de-fined Summer Discipleship

Bloomfield Presbyterian Church

Summer Micro-Groups at Bloomfield are an opportunity to encourage one another in relationship with God, while living out that relationship in connection with other people. Although restrictions on meeting in large groups remain, there are still opportunities to meet in gardens, coffee shops or for a walk.

Over the summer months groups of three or four people are encouraged to meet fortnightly to pray, and consider material that encourages them to grow deeper in their faith – perhaps a Bible study, a Christian book or a podcast series. Some people have signed up for a group, while other groups of friends have approached the opportunity more naturally just by choosing to include something like this as part of meet ups and conversations over the summer they would have been having anyway.

Micro-Groups aren't a new concept, but as we emerge out of lockdown they provide an opportunity to reconnect with each other and encourage one another in our connection to God.
